NEWS OF VARIOUS KINDS

Geo. Vogel of Solon Mills had two fast entries in the Aurora races last week. General Baldwin was down for the 2:12 pace and George Azoff was entered in the 2:20 trot and won third money.

After working for over a year the R. R. Birdall Construction Co., last week finished cement paving on the road between Burlington and Rochester. Work is finished, but the cement must set for some two weeks before the road is opened for travel.

Uncle Sam is ready to pay out the hundreds of acres of land taken west of the old main station at Great Lakes. With $546,000 available at Washington, the navy department right now is getting ready to make out and mail checks to the land owners whose property was commandeered.

Mrs. Laura Taylor, wife of Coroner J. L. Taylor, of Libertyville, died last Thursday about one o'clock. Mrs. Taylor had been in poor health for a number of years, and for several weeks she had been confined to her bed. The funeral was held from the Methodist Episcopal church Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

Contract for the construction of one and one-third miles of concrete pavement on Barrington-Waukegan road last week was awarded to the Eclipse Construction company, whose bid was $40,457.10. But one bid was received for construction of 46 miles of road between Volo and Waukegan, and that exceeded the estimate and was rejected.

Two bicycle races, a five-mile event for boys under 16 years of age, and 10-mile free-for-all for men, both open to Lake county riders only, are scheduled to take place at the Libertyville fair grounds track on Saturday afternoon, July 30. The first prize is a $50 Excelsior bicycle and there are ten other minor prizes. Admission free.

The removal of Harrison Parker as president and trustee of the Co-Operative Society of America and N. A. Hawkenson and John Coe, trustees, and the placing of this concern into receivership is sought in a bill in equity filed in a circuit court in Chicago last week. This association operates a number of stores in McHenry county, Ill.

Two circuses are to show at Lake Geneva, the Al. G. Barnes and Sells-Floto, one today and the other Saturday. The Sells-Floto were first to get their circus posters up and the Barnes people came along and covered them with their posters. In a suit before Justice F. X. Klein of Burlington, the Barnes people were ordered to get new Sells-Floto bills and the Barnes outfit was assessed the court costs. New bills are up and the costs paid.

The modern duplex flat building on Henry street, Burlington, owned by Dr. G. Warren Newell is to be converted into a hospital to be known as the Warren Newell hospital. Dr. G. Warren Newell is fitting up the building, joining the flats by putting doors between, and expects to have it ready to receive patients by August 1. There will be a thoroughly equipped operating room, also rooms for twelve patients, and it will be as pleasant a place in which to recuperate as there is anywhere.

Motorists driving in the vicinity of Highland Park, Lake Forest and Lake Bluff will do well to keep an eye on their speedometers. Deerfield-Shields township has set a new pace for speeders by employing a speed constable, not cop, if you please. The township is the first in Lake county and the North Shore to employ a speed constable. Sheriff Green was asked to swear in a new officer. The "dooty" of the new officer will be to pinch hurry-up drivers after they have dashed out of the jurisdiction of the city motorcyclists cops in the township. Several other townships are planning to follow suit.

How Do They Get That Way?

O-mi-gosh!

Tuesday p. m., our trusty guardian of the law, while performing his "dooty" in the north end of town was surprised to see a huge touring car going at a merry clip. Mounting his one-half of one per cent (meaning Oakland automobile) gave chase. Our village President, likewise, hopped his trusty steed to see the outcome of the event, only to meet the officer coming back empty handed. On inquiry as to the circumstances the wearer of the bright shining star said "It's only William Jennings (grape-juice) Bryan, on his way to Waukegan to speak at a chautauqua, and I didn't want to run him in."

Ho, Hum!

When Otto Klass was notified that he was second choice by the judges for the prize for the best decorated window he was somewhat surprised and said it reminded him of a story of a little girl at a picnic. When some event had taken place and the judges walked up to her and awarded the prize, she exclaimed, "I thank you, but I wasn't playing."

We hope Otto gets in the game next week.

Wm. Keulman Wins Prize for Window Display

The judges for the best window display used by merchants this week was awarded to William Keulman. There was no attempt on the part of some of the merchants as to the improvement of their windows and the majority still plead the alibi that they did not have the time. It is the hope of the Antioch News that these merchants will soon find the means of overcoming this lack of time to compete in this novel feature backed by the Commercial association to improve the outward appearance of the town and make it an attraction to visitors to our town.

The method of selection of the winner was devised by the association and consists of three judges, each one to name his first choice and second choice, the merchant receiving two firsts to be the winner or the merchant winning a first and two seconds. In case of a tie the judges will then confer and select a winner.

The winner of the award will not be the winner of the prize a second time unless he makes a change in his display. The awarding of the prize will not depend wholly on artistic display of a window as the effort on the part of the merchant to better his display window will receive consideration.

Revenue Officer to Be Stationed at Waukegan

The United States internal revenue office for Lake county will be open from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. the last two and the first working day of each month, where a representative of the revenue office from Chicago will be stationed to receive government taxes or give such information the taxpayer might desire in reference to internal revenue laws.

Any checks mailed to Waukegan postoffice received there on or before the last day of this month will be taken care of, but on the aforesaid days mentioned a deputy will be there the entire day.

Rev. G. A. MacWhorter at St. Ignatius' Church

Next Sunday, the tenth Sunday after Trinity, there will be a celebration of the holy communion at 8 o'clock in the morning and a children's Eucharist at 9:45. Every part of the service will be explained to the children. Those who desire to make their communions are asked to do so at the 8 o'clock celebration as the late service will be morning prayer. The Rev. Gardner A. MacWhorter, our former priest-in-charge and at present the religious editor of the Chicago Tribune, will be the visiting priest. Everyone is invited to be present.

Death Overtakes A. J. White
Andrew J. White was born near Millburn, Ill., on August 18, 1848, and departed this life in Boulden, Colo., on July 9, 1921, at the age of 72 years.

Mr. White had many friends in Antioch and surrounding villages. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon and burial took place in the Lyons cemetery.

Will Appear at Tuesday's Chautauqua Concert

SOLIS' MARIMBA BAND

America's Greatest Chautauqua Attraction to Appear on Our Chautauqua.

Solis' Marimba Band was made up from native Central American musicians through whose tropical blood courses the spirit of Castilian harmony. From among a number of widely known bands this was selected by the Mutual because of its striking novelty and sustained merit, and without doubt it is one of the finest organizations we have presented. Their range is from the heaviest overtures and classic offerings to the tuneful popular numbers that every one applauds. The Solo and Duet numbers are particularly noteworthy. Last year on our Northern circuit this band was a sensation, instantly winning the people through its picturesque appeal and merit. You find their program a real novelty and their music of the most critical excellence. This company has played in the best music houses and theaters in America and is constantly in demand by them but through the efforts of the Mutual they were induced to enter Chautauqua work which has become a delight to them, and we are proud to have had a part in bringing to the Chautauqua platform such an acceptable organization, for we have yet to find a company of any character which is so generally pleasing to the Chautauqua audience.

ANNUAL LAKE VILLA DAY IS AUGUST 13

The second annual Lake Villa day is to be held Saturday, Aug. 13, at Lake Villa and is to extend from 9:00 a. m., until midnight. Last year this show proved to be a big success, and this year General Manager Frank T. Fowler promises to make even a better showing than last year.

Among some of the feature events for this year will be a plowing match and tractor stunts, cash prizes being awarded for these events. No entrance fee or admission fee will be charged for these events.

A horse and pony show will also be one of the events held and the management announces 130 or more horses and ponies will be entered in this show. This feature will be held in the new big ring with a large seating capacity around it and will flat jumpers, harness and saddle horses and ponies. An added attraction to this horse event will be the appearance of Greatheart, the world's champion high jumper. This horse will make the attempt to break its own record.

A full and guaranteed list of events will appear in next week's, August 4, edition of the Antioch News.

The entire program will be under the auspices of the Lake Villa Township Commercial association, Frank T. Fowler, general chairman and W. M. Marks, secretary of general committee.

The committee assures all who attend a good time and invite their neighboring townships to come and spend the day and participate in the events.

Did You Buy Your Sears-Roebuck Catalog?

At the local postoffice there are big piles of catalogs from Sears-Roebuck of Chicago, awaiting to be delivered. These catalogs were sent out with insufficient postage and in order to get yours, you have to pay the extra few pennies.

Is it possible the citizens of Antioch will spend their money, which will amount to quite a sum, after they collect a few pennies on each of several thousand catalogs, to help drive business away from local merchants and help boost Chicago's mail order houses?

Ladies of St. Ignatius' Church in Annual Bazaar

The ladies of St. Ignatius' church will hold their fifth annual bazaar at the Antioch opera house on Wednesday, August 10th, starting at 10:30 a. m.

The big attraction of the day will be a miniature musical review entitled "A Day in Flowerdom." There will also be fancy dances and other specialties. The entertainment will start at 8 p. m.

Sells One Car a Day

The Antioch Sales and Service station has a special selling record for the month of July, averaging one car a day for the entire month.

Com. Skubic at Legion Meeting

Saturday evening, July 30, a meeting will be called at the News office for the purpose of completing plans for an Antioch post of the American Legion. The boys will be addressed by Com. Skubic of the Lawndale-Crawford post of Chicago, who will receive signatures necessary for a charter. A preliminary meeting was held last Monday evening when some of the ex-service boys met to arrange plans for the coming event.

It will be necessary for all the ex-service men in Antioch and surrounding villages to co-operate to make the post a success. Fifteen members are required to establish a post, and over eighty members are in this community eligible to join.

It's up to you, Mr. ex-service man, to go over the top in giving Antioch a real, wide-awake Legion post. Be on hand Saturday night.

Antioch Bank Robber Released on Bonds

John Gilmore, indicted for the robbery of the Antioch state bank, last week was released on $10,000 bonds, before Judge C. C. Edwards, L. P. Lindeloff of Channel Lake signing the bond.

Lindeloff is the same man who signed the bond of John C. Heaps, who was arrested on a charge of holding up Andre Pucin's place and escaping with $15,000. Heaps then disappeared and was captured in Indiana after robbing a bank there, for which he has been sentenced to prison. Heaps forfeited his bonds, and when State's Attorney ordered the bondsman to either produce Heaps or pay the forfeit, Lindeloff told where Heaps could be found.

Rinear Farm Soon to Be Subdivided

The Rinear farm, a beautiful 78-acre tract located just opposite the depot is to be subdivided into building lots. Mr. Rinear has been given an option of $500.00 per acre, and the deal is about to be closed.

A large department store site directly opposite the depot is also under contemplation by a Chicago business concern, according to Mr. Rinear's statement. Rinear's farm is one of the most beautiful and ideally located in Lake county, consisting of 78 acres of almost level ground, one-half of which is in the village limits of Antioch.

LARGE CROWD TO ATTEND CHAUTAUQUA

Offers Excellent Well-Balanced
Program Starting
Tomorrow

TICKETS SELLING RAPIDLY

The chautauqua is a wonderful institution nowadays; it is an educational and inspirational movement, moving along altruistic lines; it is rated everywhere now as being the third greatest instrumentality in the United States for community building and influence—the church, the school and the chautauqua. It brings more to a community now than any other one thing—things of instruction, inspiration, things that build the community, entertainments, lectures and music.

Antioch is to be congratulated on having men who are big enough and unselfish enough to want the people of this town to enjoy the clean entertainment this company offers. They are backing this chautauqua and it is up to the people of Antioch to show their appreciation by backing the local committee and buying season tickets. Only by the use of the season tickets can these wonderful programs be brought to you at such a low price.

The boys and girls have a big advantage over the grown-ups at the chautauqua. Not only do they have all the privileges of the adult chautauqua in the afternoon and evenings of the five days, but they have their own junior chautauqua in the mornings.

This children's morning hour is in charge of Miss Wayland, the junior supervisor, and she assures you that all the children that come will have a good time. Any child in this community is invited to the morning hour whether they have a season ticket or not.

The general outline of the children's program is as follows:

8:00 a. m.—Boys between ten and fourteen years old meet for pyramid building and regular boys games. One of the our local men will assist Miss Wayland in this work.

9 a. m.—The girls and smaller boys meet for games and songs and practice for the children's pageant.

In the afternoon the children having tickets may come to the musical part of the program and on days of lectures, Miss Wayland will take all who do not wish to stay for the lecture out to a cool place for story hour.

On Monday night at 8 o'clock, the children attending the morning hour will present a wild flower pageant. This pageant will be followed by a concert by the Marimba band. Costumes for this pageant will be furnished by the company.

The first meeting for the children will be held Friday morning on the grade school ground the boys at 8:30, and the other children at 9 a. m.

The program for the chautauqua this year is probably the best and most well balanced bill that has ever been presented to an Antioch audience.

On the opening night (tomorrow), Fiecht's Original Alpine Toddlers are the attraction. These Swiss yodlers appear in the holiday dress worn in their country, and sing an echo song. The mountains of Switzerland form a natural sounding board and when a yodel is given, the echo comes back with all the richness of the tones therein. Mrs. Fiecht and her daughter, Miss Anna Fiecht, will give what is called on echo song, and if the audience will use their imagination a few minutes they will think they are in Switzerland, as Mrs. Fiecht sings the yodling song and the echo is given by Miss Anna Fiecht, who is several blocks from the tent.

On the second day Miss Vera Poppe is the big attraction. Miss Poppe sang for the Edison Co. singing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," one of their most popular records. Miss Poppe includes this as one of her numbers.

Monday, Solis' Marimba band has never yet failed to please. There have been people who failed to hear the Marimba band, and next day all they

The VOICE OF THE PACK

BY EDISON MARSHALL

COPYRIGHT, 1920, BY LITTLE, BROWN, AND COMPANY.

The thought sobered and halted her. She glanced once at the dark face of her companion. Dan couldn't understand the strange light that suddenly leaped to her eyes. Perhaps she herself couldn't have explained the wave of tenderness that swept over her—with no cause except the look in Dan's earnest gray eyes and the lines that cut so deep. Since the world was new, it has been the boast of the boldest of men that they looked their fate in the face. And this is no mean looking. For fate is a sword from the darkness, a power that reaches out of the mystery, and cannot be clasped with sights of human origin. It burns out the eyes of all but the strongest men. Yet Dan was looking at his fate now, and his eyes held straight.

They walked together down to the ruined house, and the three of them sat silent while the fire burned red. Then Lennox turned to them with a half-smile.

"You're wasting time, you two," he said. "Remember, all our food is gone. If you start now, and walk hard, maybe you can make it out."

"There are several things to do first," Dan answered simply.

"I don't know what they are. It isn't going to be any picnic, Dan. A man can travel only so far without food to keep up his strength, particularly over such ridges as you have to cross. It will be easy to give up and die. It's the test, man; it's the test."

"And what about you?" his daughter asked.

"Oh, I'll be all right. Besides—it's the only thing that can be done. I can't walk, and you can't carry me on your backs. What else remains? I'll stay here—and I'll scrape together enough wood to keep a fire. Then you can bring help."

He kept his eyes averted when he talked. He was afraid for Dan to see them, knowing that he could read the lie in them.

"How do you expect to find wood—in this snow?" Dan asked him. "It will take four days to get out; do you think you could live here and battle with a fire for four days, and then four days more that it will take to come back? You'd have two choices: to burn green wood that I'd cut for you before I left, or the rain-soaked dead-wood under the snow. You couldn't keep either one of them burning, and you'd die in a night. Besides—this is no time for an unarmed man to be alone in the hills."

Lennox's voice grew pleading. "Be sensible, Dan!" he cried. "That Cranston's got us, and got us right. I've only one thing more I care about—and that is that you pay the debt I can't hope to get out myself. I say that I can't even hope to. But if you bring my daughter through—and when spring comes, pay what we owe to Cranston—I'll be content. Heavens, son—I've lived my life. The old pack leader dies when his time comes, and so does a man."

His daughter crept to him and sheltered his gray head against her breast. "I'll stay with you, then," she cried.

"Don't be a little fool, Snowbird," he urged. "My clothes are wet already from the melted snow. It's too long a way—it will be too hard a fight, and children—I'm old and tired out. I don't want to make the try—hunger and cold; and even if you'd stay here and grub wood, Snowbird, they'd find us both dead when they came back in a week. We can't live without food, and work and keep warm—and there isn't a living creature in the hills."

"Except the wolves," Dan reminded him.

"Except the wolves," Lennox echoed. "Remember, we're unarmed—and they'd find it out. You're young, Snowbird, and so is Dan—and you two will be happy. I know how things are, you two—more than you know yourselves—and in the end you'll be happy. But me—I'm too tired to make the try. I don't care about it enough. I'm going to wave you, good-by, and smile, and lie here and let the cold come down. You feel warm in a little while."

But she stopped his lips with her hand. And he bent and kissed it.

"If anybody's going to stay with you," Dan told them in a clear, firm voice, "it's going to be me. But aren't any of the cabin occupied?"

"You know they aren't," Lennox answered. "Not even the houses beyond the North Fork, even if we could get across. The nearest help is over seventy miles."

"Not one thing," the girl told him. "You know Cranston and his crowd robbed the place last winter. And the telephone lines were disconnected when the rangers left."

"Then the only way is for me to stay here. You can take the pistol, and you'll have a fair chance of getting through. I'll grub wood for our camp meanwhile, and you can bring help."

"And if the wolves come, or if help didn't come in time," Lennox whispered, passion-driven for the first time, "who would pay what we owe to Cranston?"

"But her life counts—first of all."

"I know it does—but mine doesn't count at all. Believe me, you two, I'm speaking from my own desires when I say I don't want to make the fight. Snowbird would never make it through alone. There are the wolves, and maybe Cranston too—the worst wolf of all. A woman can't mush across those ridges four days without food, without some one who loves her and forces her on! Neither can she stay here with me and try to make green branches burn in a fire. She's got three little pistol balls—and we'd all die for a while. Oh, please, please."

But Dan leaped for his hand with glowing eyes. "Listen, man!" he cried. "I know another way yet. I know more than one way; but one. If we've got the strength, it's almost sure. There is an ax in the kitchen, and the blade will still be good."

"Likely dulled with the fire—"

"I'll cut a limb with my jackknife for the handle. There will be nails in the ashes, plenty of them. We'll make a rude sledge, and we'll get you out too."

Lennox seemed to be studying his wasted hands. "It's a chance, but it isn't worth it," he said at last. "You'll have light enough without tugging at a heavy sled. It will take all night to build it, and it would cut down your chances of getting out by pretty near half. Remember the ridges, Dan."

"The Thing Bert Cranston Burned the House Down to Destroy."

"But we'll climb every ridge—besides, it's a slow, down grade most of the way. Snowbird—tell him he must do it."

Snowbird told him, overpowering him with her enthusiasm. And Dan shook his shoulders with rough hands. "You're hurting, boy!" Lennox warned. "I'm a bag of broken bones."

"I'll tote you down there if I have to tie you in," Dan palling replied. "Before, I've bowed to your will; but this time you have to bow to mine. I'm not going to let you stay here and die, no matter if you beg on your knees! It's the test—and I'm going to bring you through."

He meant what he said. If mortal strength and sinew could survive such a test, he would succeed. There was nothing in these words to suggest the physical weakness that both of them had known a few months before. The eyes were earnest, the dark face intent, the determined voice did not waver at all.

"Dan Falling speaks!" Lennox replied with glowing eyes. He was recalling another Dan Falling of the dead years, a boyhood hero, and his remembered voice had never been more determined, more masterful than this he had just heard.

"And Cranston didn't get his purpose, after all." To prove his words, Dan thrust his hand into his inner coat pocket. He drew forth a little, flat package, half as thick as a pack of cards. He held it up for them to see. "The thing Bert Cranston burned the house down to destroy," he explained. "I'm learning to know this mountain breed, Lennox. I kept it in my pocket where I could fight for it, at any minute."

Cranston had been mistaken, after all, in thinking that in fear of himself Dan would be afraid to keep the packet on his person, and would cravenly conceal it in the house. He would have been even more surprised to know that Dan had lived in constant hope of meeting Cranston on the ridges, showing him what it contained, and fighting him for it, hands to hands. And even yet perhaps the day would come when Cranston would know at last that Snowbird's words, after the fight of long ago, were true.

The twilight was falling over the snow, so Snowbird and Dan turned to the task of building a sled.

The snow was steel-gray in the moonlight when the little party made their start down the long trail. Their preparations, simple and crude as they were, had taken hours of ceaseless labor on the part of the three. The ax, its edge dulled by the flame and its handle burned away, had been cooled in the snow, and with one square arm, Lennox had driven the hot nails that Snowbird gathered from the ashes of one of the outbuildings. The embers of the house itself still glowed red in the darkness.

Dan had cut the green limbs of the trees and planned them with his ax. The sled had been completed, handles attached for pushing it, and a piece of fence wire fastened with nails as a rope to pull it. The warm mackinaws of both of them as well as the one blanket that Lennox had saved from the fire were wrapped about the old frontiersman's body—Dan and Snowbird hoping to keep warm by the exercise of propelling the sled. Except for the dull ax and the half-empty pistol, their only equipment was a single charred pole for melting snow that Dan had recovered from the ashes of the kitchen.

The three had worked almost in silence. Words didn't help now. They wasted no more needed breath. But they did have one minute to talk when they got to the top of the little ridge that had overlooked the house.

"We'll travel mostly at night," Dan told them. "We can see in the snow, and by taking our rest in the daytime, when the sun is bright and warm, we can save our strength. We won't have to keep such big fires then—and at night our exertion will keep us as warm as we can hope for. Getting up all night to cut green wood with this dull ax in the snow would break us to pieces very soon, for remember that we haven't any food. I know how to build a fire even in the snow—especially if I can find the kind of heart of a rotten log—but it isn't any fun to keep it going with green wood. We don't want to have to spend any more of our strength stripping off wet bark and hacking at saplings than we can help; and that means we'd better do our resting in the heat of the day. After all, it's a fight against starvation more than anything else."

"Just think," the girl told them, reproaching herself. "If I had shot straight at that wolf today, we could have gone back and got his body. It might have carried us through."

Neither of the others as much as looked surprised at these amazing regrets over the lost, unsavory flesh of a wolf. They were up against realities, and they didn't need words. Dan smiled at her gently, and his great shoulder leaned against the traces.

They moved through a dead world. The ever-present manifestations of wild life that had been such a delight to Dan in the summer and fall were quite lacking now. The snow was trackless. Once they thought they saw a snowshoe rabbit, a strange shadow on the snow, but he was too far away for Snowbird to risk a pistol shot. The pound or two of flesh would be sorely needed before the journey was over, but the pistol cartridges might be needed still more, she didn't let her mind rest on certain possibilities where they might be needed. Such thoughts stole the courage from the spirit, and courage was essential beyond all things else to bring them through.

As the dawn came out, they all stood still and listened to the wolf pack, singing on the ridge somewhere behind them.

It was a large pack. They couldn't make out individual voices—neither the more shrill cry of the females, the yapping of the cubs, or the low, clear G-below-middle-C note of the males.

"If they should cross our tracks," Lennox suggested.

"No use worrying about that now—not until we come to it," Dan told him.

The morning broke, the sun rose bright in a clear sky. But still they trudged on. In spite of the fact that the sled was heavy and broke through the snow crust as they tugged at it, they had made good time since their departure. But now every step was a pronounced effort. It was the dreadful beginning of fatigue that only food and warmth and rest could rectify.

Oldtime Sleeping Couches. The ancients slept on skins, but later beds were made of rushes, heather and straw. The Romans were the first to use feathers to make their beds more comfortable. Hollogabulus, 218 B. C., is credited with having employed air cushions, and air beds were used generally in the sixteenth century.

Some Very Old Trees. Yaw trees grow to a great age. Those at Torenain's Abbey, Yorkshire, England, were old in 1132. California has trees thousands of years old in the Morongo grove, and baobab trees in Africa are over four centuries old.

Most Intelligent Animal. Scientists say that the chimpanzee is superior to any other animal except man. Next in order comes the gorilla, then the orang-outang. The gibbon, still another variety of ape, comes fourth.

To Have a Clear Sweet Skin. Touch pimples, redness, roughness or itching, if any, with Cuticura Ointment, then bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse, dry gently and dust on a little Cuticura Talcum to leave a fascinating fragrance on skin. Everywhere 25c each.

DEMAND FOR TANLAC BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Amazing Success Achieved by Celebrated Medicine Not Only Phenomenal, But Unprecedented—Over 20,000,000 Bottles Sold in Six Years—Foreign Countries Clamor for It.

Never before, perhaps, in the history of the drug trade has the demand for a proprietary medicine ever approached the wonderful record that is now being made by Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results throughout this country and Canada. As a matter of fact, the marvelous success achieved by this medicine is not only phenomenal, but unprecedented.

The first bottle of Tanlac to reach the public was sold just a little over six years ago. Its success was immediate and people everywhere were quick to recognize it as a medicine of extraordinary merit. Since that time there have been sold throughout this country and Canada something over Twenty Million (20,000,000) bottles, establishing a record which has probably never been equaled in the history of the drug trade in America.

Fame Is International.

The instant and phenomenal success which Tanlac won when it was first introduced has been extended to practically every large city, small town, village and hamlet in North America. Its fame has become international in its scope and England, Japan, Mexico, Cuba, Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico and many European countries are clamoring for it.

From coast to coast and from Great Lakes to the Gulf, Tanlac is known and honored. Millions have taken it with the most gratifying and astonishing results.

Restored to Health.

Still others, who seemed fairly well, yet who suffered with indigestion, headaches, shortness of breath, dizzy spells, sour, gassy stomachs, coated tongues, foulness of breath, constipation, bad complexion, loss of appetite, sleeplessness at night and so terribly debilitated, depressed feelings, state that they have been entirely relieved of these distressing symptoms and restored to health and happiness by the use of Tanlac.

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Large Attendance at Sunday School Convention

The Antioch-Lake Villa Township Sunday School association met in convention at Millburn Sunday afternoon, July 24.

Each school in the township was well represented also good delegations were present from Waukegan and Rosecrans. The convention opened with a song service led by Rev. S. E. Pollock of Antioch and a large choir.

After the Devotional service led by Rev. McClosky of Lake Villa, the convention divided into three conferences namely: the Children's Department with Miss Vivian Bonner in charge, the Young Peoples department with Miss Mary Stanley in charge and the Adult department with Frank Edwards in charge.

The speakers at these conferences were Mrs. Stuart Brown of Highland Park at the Children's conference, Miss Helen Wright of Libertyville, Rev. Pollock of Antioch, Rev. Kane county shows a decrease in the number of its farms from 2,309 in 1910 to 2,248 in 1920, with an 82.9 per cent increase in value. In DuPage county the number of farms has increased from 1,599 in 1910 to 1,756 in 1920, and their value has increased 84.7 per cent.

Explanation of Name "Canada."
There are various theories as to how Canada came to be so called, one which meets with wide approval is that the word Canada is derived from an Indian word, "Kanatha," meaning a village or collection of huts, and it is supposed that Jacques Cartier, hearing this word used by the Indians with reference to their settlements, mistook its meaning, and applied it to the whole country.

A Proposal That Went Astray

By HAZEL SMITH

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Betty, what is that I hear about your new beau?" asked her Aunt Jessie indignantly.

Jessie McIntire was thirty-two and not pretty. She lived with her widowed sister, Mrs. Charters, and her only child, over whose madcap nature she exercised what restraint was possible.

"Who told you?" asked Betty, turning on her aunt in artful triumph.

"My dear, it's become village gossip," said Aunt Jessie. "And when a thing gets to be that it's time something was done. How about George Crothers?"

"Oh, George is all right," said Betty. "But George is just my ordinary, regular beau, and Wilfred is quite different."

"Wilfred?" exclaimed her aunt. "Wilfred who?"

"Now you'll have to find that out for yourself, aunt," said Betty, dancing away. "But don't be afraid. I'm only leading him on just to have some fun with him. He's really too old for me, aunt—he must be nearly forty."

"Betty, I'm going to tell you something," said Jessie McIntire. "You're only a slip of a child yet and you don't know nearly as much as I do about—"

"About men, aunt?" queried Betty in amusement, seeing the color flaming in her aunt's face.

"About the world," Aunt Jessie answered. "Years ago—ten years, I suppose said Aunt Jessie, I met somebody—never mind where, I was an inexperienced, impulsive girl and he was my first conquest. One evening, when he had been calling on me, and had said good-night he stopped at the door and looked at me. I was very much in love with him, although he had said nothing to me. I suppose my face told him all that he wanted to know. He bent down and kissed me, and I let him. That's all."

"Oh, Aunt Jessie, how perfectly lovely!" exclaimed her niece delightedly. "And to think you kept the secret all these years and never told me. Go on."

"That's all," answered her aunt quietly.

"But what happened, Aunt Jessie? Did he propose or what?"

"Nothing happened, my dear," the elder woman answered. "On the following day I received a letter from him. He told me how much he loved me and begged that I would tell him whether I returned his love. If I did not answer, he said, he would know that his love was hopeless. Of course I didn't answer."

"But didn't you love him, Aunt Jessie?" inquired her niece in astonishment.

"My dear, I loved him with all my heart. But he said nothing of marriage, and I am old-fashioned enough to believe that a proposal should precede any demonstration of affection. And I knew he would never marry a girl who had let herself be kissed."

"That's why I want to warn you Betty dear."

"I don't see that you have wrecked your life at all; I think you are just old-fashioned," pointed her niece, springing away. She looked at the door. "Wilfred is coming to supper on Sunday night, aunt," she said mockingly, and flew down the street. Half an hour later, glancing through the window, saw her in rapid conversation with George Crothers.

Sunday came. The name of the visitor was still obstinately withheld by Betty. But about four o'clock she came clanking upstairs. "He's here, aunt," she exclaimed. "You'll hear the bell ring in a moment. And the bell pealed almost upon the words."

Half an hour later, when Miss McIntire came downstairs she saw a tall stranger standing on the hearth, listening with amusement to Betty's chatter. He raised his head.

"Aunt Jessie, this is Mr. Garvin," said Betty.

Aunt Jessie's cheeks were redder than her niece's. As for Mr. Garvin, there was a look in his eyes which seemed to indicate that he had not been wholly unprepared for the meeting.

The next ten minutes were miserable ones for the McIntires.

St. Peter's Took Century to Build. Over a century elapsed between the day the plans for St. Peter's church at Rome were submitted and the day of the consecration of the magnificent structure. Consequently, no one can claim full credit for its erection, though the Italian architect Bramante deserves the lion's share, for he made the original design under orders from Pope Julius II, about 1503. In 1500 the Pontiff laid the first stone.

Moody's Last Sermon. Dwight L. Moody preached the last sermon of his life in Kansas City in Convention hall on the night of November 16, 1890. He had undertaken to conduct revival meetings in the hall from November 12 to 15, but on the night of November 16 he became so ill that the next afternoon he gave up the meetings and returned home. He died at his home in Northfield, Mass., December 22, 1891.

"Well," said Betty at last, "as you two seem such uninteresting company this afternoon I shall leave you alone for a while. And she stalked out in dudgeon."

The man went quietly over to Miss McIntire and took her hands.

"I'm going to tell you something now in spite of your silence," he said. "Perhaps you had reasons for your silence then which have been removed. Jessie, I have loved you for ten years—want you marry me now?"

"Marry—now?" gasped Jessie McIntire. "Why—Wilfred—you never asked me before."

"But I wrote to you!" he exclaimed. "Did you not get my letter?"

"But you only said you loved me," she faltered. "I thought you despised me because—because—I let you kiss me."

"I thought you understood," he cried, catching her in his arms. "Is it too late now, Jessie? Will you marry me? There—now—"

"Aunt Jessie!" cried Betty at the door. "George Crothers is coming to have supper with us. We—"

She looked from one to the other in amazement; and then, because she was really good, her chagrin was swallowed up in happiness.

Winthrop Solves a Jewel Robbery

By MURIEL BLAIR

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

An antique ring had been stolen from a jewelry tray in the case under my charge. Goldstein & Co. had acted promptly. I was notified that my services were no longer required. This senior partner of the firm took great pains to inform me that my dismissal carried with it no implication of personal dishonesty. There had been so many of such thefts recently, however, that an example of presumable carelessness must be made. Unfortunately they had begun with me.

If it had not been for the stenographer, Miss Laura Vesey, I think I should have packed up faster to return to my native town, disgusted with jewelers in general and justly indignant at Goldstein & Co. After I had parted with several good friends among the clerks, who honestly regretted my departure, I was surprised to find Miss Vesey at my side. Just as I was leaving the place. She was in tears. She placed a sisterly, affectionate hand on my arm in a pleading sympathetic way that softened me.

"You will not get discouraged?" she said.

"Does it matter much?" I jerked out, still writh at my summary dismissal.

"It does to me," she replied earnestly, "more than you think. It matters to my brother, too, Mr. Winthrop. You found him a good position, and he will be always grateful. If I can help you—"

But I shook my head dejectedly. "At least let me hear how you get along," she added, and there was a tremor in her voice that inspired me with the idea that I had one sterling friend in the world.

So I promised her, and went on my way. I remembered all about that missing antique ring. In fact, I knew the man who had stolen it. At least I thought I did.

I am not much of a story teller, but to look ahead a little, my hard thinking assured me that I might make a good detective.

My first step was to go to the Jewelers' Board of Trade. That was where they kept the records of the trade, and I knew mine would follow me. The secretary was a bland, bright-eyed old man. I told my story. I also rectified my suspicions. I could see that he was becoming interested in me.

"You think the man who pilfered the missing antique ring today is a professional, eh?" he inquired.

"I am certain of it."

"See here," said the secretary, "I like your talk. Nobody thinks of suspecting you, for these robberies have become an every-day event. I want to run this, however: If you succeed in tracing down the gang who are guilty of these systematic pilferings, the Jewelers' Board of Trade will pay you a reward of one thousand dollars."

I struck my quarry the third day. At a street corner occupied by one of the leading diamond houses, my attention was attracted to a man and a woman conversing. Then both entered the diamond shop. The woman was chewing gum.

I followed them as far as the window, and noted their every movement. The fashionably dressed woman was shown a tray of unset stones. The man proceeded to eat an apple. She asked to be shown some other gems. The companion drew nearer to the tray. I saw the woman take her gum from her mouth. Then the man tossed the core of the apple into the street, and came back to the side of his companion.

I was after that apple core double-quick.

Apparently the couple had found nothing to suit them and started to leave the store. Suddenly the salesman called to the floorwalker and ran out from behind the counter.

"Two diamonds are missing from the tray," he declared.

"You must submit to a search," said the clerk firmly.

"They accompanied the salesman, who was joined by a lady clerk to the fitting rooms. I glided up to the spot where they had stood at the counter. I slipped my fingers along the under edge of the show case.

The two suspects came out of the retiring rooms threatening but triumphant. The missing gems had not been found.

"I shall start a suit through my lawyer at once," said my man; and moved towards the counter against which his umbrella rested.

"Wait," I said, and blocked his way. "Examine that," I added, extending an apple core to the astonished clerk. "And that," and I handed a wand of gum to the floorwalker.

"What does this mean?" inquired the salesman vaguely, and then his eye rested on a sparkling eye of light imbedded in the fruit. At the same moment the floorwalker discovered the second gem in the gum, which the deft woman swiftness had stuck on the under rim of the counter, where I had found it.

The man turned red, then white. The woman fainted. I telephoned the Jewelers' Board of Trade. Its secretary appeared in person, then the police. The man willingly confessed to the theft of the antique ring.

Goldstein & Co. offered handsome apologies and an increased salary. However, with the one thousand dollars I followed my natural bent, became a secret service man, as I have already told, and married that pretty, sympathetic stenographer, of course.

Opeka All Stars Defeat Antioch

In a well played game by both teams, Antioch, although out-hitting their rivals 8 to 7, were defeated by the Opeka All Stars of North Chicago by a 6 to 3 score.

The visitors scored twice in the first inning and added three more in the sixth on three safe wallops, one being a three base hit by S. Kaberec. The local boys were hitting fairly well, but could not connect when hits meant runs, and kept plugging away without scoring until the eighth, when five consecutive swats scored three runs, but were not enough to overcome the lead held by the North Chicago boys.

The patient had what was supposed to be stomach trouble for many years and had been examined by many doctors but none found the trouble. It was a very rare condition for a child of this age to have.

AUNTIE'S WISH

By GRACE CANFIELD.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Wish I may,
Wish I might
Have the wish I wish tonight."

The slender, white-haired figure was very still as she fervently repeated the old incantation, and after it the wish, "I want a young man!"

Aunt Emmy had not intended to speak aloud, nor was she even aware that she had done so. And so intent was she that she did not hear the gasp of amazement from the other side of the room.

Niece Marjorie retreated hastily to her own room to consider the amazing situation. Aunt Emmy, sixty if she was a day (thus Marjorie, with the unconscious cruelty of youth), and wanting a man! Why, she hated men! It was only with the greatest difficulty that Marjorie could secure her permission to go anywhere with a male escort.

"The old ducky dear," sighed Marjorie to herself. "She has been everything in the world to me for years, and I have been only a selfish brute to return. If she wants a young man she shall certainly have one!"

In the early twilight of the next evening Marjorie again saw her aunt standing in the western window, repeating her wish to Venus. The north window by which Marjorie stood opened on a porch, and as she paused, wondering what to do, she heard a soft whisper from outside the window. "Marge, can't you come out for a walk?" The girl slipped out of the room and met Eaton at the door.

"You mustn't ask me again," she said. "You know auntie doesn't like to have me go out with men."

Marjorie suddenly interrupted his half-uttered complaint. "Eaton, did you hear what auntie was saying—to the stars?" He flushed. "Yes, I'm sorry. I didn't intend to."

"I'm glad you did," she said quickly. "Eaton, I love my Aunt Emmy, and if she wants a young man, she must have one."

Dimly Eaton perceived that he was about to be sacrificed on the altar of Marjorie's love, and felt still more sorry that he had overheard.

"The only way you can be my friend," she was saying, "is by being nice to Aunt Emmy."

"I'll be nice, but I won't make love," said the lad, rebelliously.

"Silly!" Marjorie flared up. "Of course you wouldn't act as you would with—"

"You," he supplied.

"A girl your own age," she continued with heightened color. "But you can pay her a lot of attention, and make her feel that you care a lot for her."

"Say!" he leaned forward eagerly. "Would I have a better chance with you?"

"Silly," she scolded again. "You must do it just for Aunt Emmy's sake."

It is just possible that the young man saw more in Marjorie's eyes than she cared to say, for his opposition was not so strong from this point on. Finally, though with some reluctance still, he yielded, and went away.

The next day, to Aunt Emmy's unbounded amazement, she received a box of American beauties by the early post.

"Who on earth—the lovely things—Eaton C." She read the card, her breath coming in soft gasps.

This was the first of her surprises, but it was by no means the last.

Eaton had determined from the start that if he did this thing he would do it well, and Marjorie was obliged to admit that he responded nobly to her plea. Candy followed flowers, and calls followed the candy, until Aunt Emmy was overwhelmed. She treated Eaton at first with a very stiff courtesy, for she had not approved of him. However, as the young man continued his attentions, completely ignoring Marjorie, the old lady visibly changed her mind, and took him into favor.

Eaton's utter neglect of Marjorie was so marked that finally she began to feel a little piqued. Of course, everyone who knew Aunt Emmy loved her to death, but he might admit that she had a niece!

It was Aunt Emmy who finally opened the subject.

"Marjorie," she said, "I have a confession to make, and I want your advice." Her niece was a little startled; she had thought confession her own prerogative.

"Do you believe in wishing on stars?" Aunt Emmy's tone was slightly abashed.

"Yes," promptly.

"Well, do you think a wish could ever go wrong?" Aunt Emmy was flushing painfully. Marjorie was puzzled.

"I don't understand." The reply came with a rush.

"I didn't like your friends—but I wanted you to have a young man—so I wished on the stars—for you."

"For me!"

"Yes. But something is wrong. Eaton C. is just the one for you—and why—he is paying attention to me—at my age!" Aunt Emmy wrung her hands in deep distress. "Oh, what shall I do?"

Marjorie laughed aloud. "Dear Aunt Emmy," she said gently, "are you sure the stars were wrong?"

"What do you mean?"

"Supposing," Marjorie's voice was almost a whisper, "supposing you leave me alone with Eaton the next time he calls. Perhaps you will find that he was meant for me, after all."
